

• CRAFT/PROFESSION

Albert WEISS is an ironworker. Ironwork comprises various specialisations such as boilermaking, locksmithing and metalwork. Albert makes all kinds of ironwork to order and to meet the requirements of his customers.

He creates metalwork designed to enhance homes or improve home security and also to add decorative touches, such as wrought iron table legs, inscriptions and lettering.

• BACKGROUND

Albert knew he wanted to work with metal when he was still very young. He began his career with a CAP diploma in general mechanics, majoring in boilermaking, from the Noumea Lycée Technique.

He spent some time working in various car workshops, perfecting his welding skills, before deciding, in 2004, to set up his own company making metal components for the building industry.

In addition to his business activity, Albert has now become involved with the craft sector and is currently Vice President of the New Caledonia Chamber of Trades and Crafts.

• INSPIRATION AND ART/DESIGNS

Albert really appreciates the creative side of his job. In the course of his day-to-day work, he finds opportunities to design creative and original solutions to meet his customers' requirements. Each piece he creates give shape to a customer's idea or inspiration.
